Statutes

Treatises

INTRODUCTION

Appellant OLIVIA LAY's (hereafter "LAY") appeal from the grant of Respondent SIAMAK SHEMIRANI's (hereafter "SHEMIRANI") motion to set aside default and default judgment and denial of LAY's motion for reconsideration runs afoul of one of the most basic concepts of appellate litigation: that an appealed judgment or order will be upheld if it is correct on any grounds, even if different from that given by the trial court. Here, while the Trial Court was vague on the basis on which it initially granted relief from default, even while acknowledging that relief under California Code of Civil Procedure § 473(b) was untimely, relief from default was proper under the Trial Court's inherent equitable authority.[1] In its order denying LAY's motion for reconsideration, the Trial Court recognized and applied the three part test set forth in Stiles v. Wallis (1983) 147 Cal.App.3d 1143 and found equitable grounds justifying relief for SHEMIRANI. SHEMIRANI sought relief on a variety of grounds, including equitable relief, when making his motion for relief.

LAY argues that the de novo standard of review applies in this case, since she claims that the Trial Court applied the standard governing relief under CCP § 473(b) even though more than six months passed from entry of default and the Trial Court entered a default judgment against SHEMIRANI. Even assuming arguendo that the Trial Court used the wrong test initially the same standard of review applies to appeals from orders on motions to set aside defaults and default judgments, whether based on CCP § 473(b), or on equitable grounds: abuse of discretion. In addition, the Trial Court in explaining its denial of LAY's motion for reconsideration, did so using the more demanding three-part Stiles test, showing that it acted within its discretion in granting relief to SHEMIRANI on equitable grounds.

---

[1] All further references to California's Code of Civil Procedure shall be to "CCP."

The Trial Court also acted well within its discretion in denying LAY's motion for reconsideration. The fact that LAY wanted to point out to the Trial Court, that SHEMIRANI had been an agent since 2008 for service of process of the corporation that employed him, had been a matter of public record for years before SHEMIRANI's motion to set side had been filed, let alone LAY's motion for reconsideration. LAY failed to explain why she did not have this information earlier. The same defect befell LAY's claims of "new or different law." Both cases LAY pointed to had been available for review for years. The need of strict diligence in explaining why a case or statute was not available previously is subject to the same diligence as required of new or different facts on reconsideration.

LAY's final argument fares no better. LAY alleges that SHEMIRANI acted as an unlicensed contractor, arguing that under California Business & Professions Code § 7031 SHEMIRANI had "unclean hands" and because he had defaulted, was not entitled to equitable relief from default.[2] LAY fares no better on this argument. The first prong of the Stiles test for equitable relief from default requires that the party seeking relief from default have a meritorious case. SHEMIRANI as part of his moving papers to set aside the default and default judgment included an answer that denied every allegation made against him by LAY, including those accusing him of improperly acting without a contractor's license. SHEMIRANI also provided written evidence as part of his moving papers that he was not acting as a contractor, but was merely a project manager, making sure that payments were properly applied for the proper work, and that SHEMIRANI, like LAY, was defrauded by one of the co-defendants, HASAN REDZIC.

There is no prejudice to LAY from granting relief from the default and default judgment. LAY and SHEMIRANI will have the opportunity resolve this case on the merits, along with the other defendants, avoiding the need for any separate lawsuits of indemnity.

---

[2] All further references to California's Business & Professions Code shall hereafter be to "B & P."

The Trial Court acted within its discretion in granting SHEMIRANI relief from default and default judgment. Accordingly both the Trial Court order granting relief from default and default judgment in SHEMIRANI's favor and the order denying LAY's motion for reconsideration must be affirmed.

STATEMENT OF THE CASE

A. Combined Factual and Procedural History.

1. LAY filed suit against a variety of defendants, including SHEMIRANI about a remodeling project at her property.

On August 22, 2017, LAY filed suit in Contra Costa County Superior Court against Defendants SHEMIRANI, individually and doing business as CASPIAN ENTERPRISE, INC., HASAN REDZIC individually and dba CASPIAN ENTERPRISE, INC., HOSSAM NASSER, and ICG ENGINEERING, INC. (Clerk's Transcript on Appeal, page 27, lines 8-17).[3]

The complaint alleged that LAY purchased her property in Rodeo, California in October 2014 (CT 27:22-24, 28:27). A residence was already on the property. LAY intended to live there and remodel the property to include a residential facility to accommodate elderly and disabled patients (CT 28:27-29:2)[4].

---

[3] All further references to the Clerk's Transcript on Appeal shall be to "CT," followed by the page number (and line number if the page is on pleading paper).

LAY shortly thereafter contacted defendant NASSER, who held himself out as a professional engineer. LAY and NASSER contracted for NASSER to provide engineering services relating to the remodel (CT 29:3-6). LAY further alleged that in approximately November 2014 NASSER approached her and told her about a licensed contractor he knew, recommending co-defendant REDZIC (CT 29:7-10). NASSER told LAY that REDZIC was a licensed contractor affiliated with Evra Construction and CASPIAN and that REDZIC and CASPIAN were qualified to perform the remodeling work (CT 29:10-12). LAY expressed interest in NASSER's recommended contractors and NASSER contacted REDZIC and asked REDZIC to prepare an estimate for the remodeling (CT 29:12-14).

REDZIC provided the estimate for the remodeling. LAY alleged that REDZIC also represented to LAY that REDZIC was affiliated with CASPIAN and Evra Construction, and the truck used by REDZIC and his workers also bore the name "Evra Construction," with a CSLB number that was assigned to Evra (CT 29:15-22).

---

[4] Unless otherwise indicated, the "facts" related to the merits of LAY's claims are from the allegations contained in LAY's complaint.

Also in November 2014, according to the complaint, REDZIC introduced LAY to SHEMIRANI (CT 29:27). LAY's complaint alleged that SHEMIRANI represented to LAY that he was also affiliated with Evra and CASPIAN and that he was working under a California contractor's license via his relationship with Evra and CASPIAN (CT 29:28-30:2). The complaint also alleged that in November and December 2014 that REDZIC and SHEMIRANI represented to LAY that they were qualified and able to perform the work on this remodel and would obtain all necessary permits for the work (CT 30:3-9).

The complaint alleged that based on these representations that LAY entered into a contract with Evra and CASPIAN to perform the work for a contract price of about $46,095 (CT 30:10-13). Work allegedly began in approximately November 2014 and continued into January 2015 (CT 30:19-20). Over the course of construction LAY paid $70,471.76 to the defendants (CT 30:22-23).

LAY alleged, based on information and belief, that NASSER's plans were defective and that the other defendants failed to follow the plans. LAY hired an inspector, who discovered a lack of necessary permits and that substantial portions of the performed work was defective (CT 30:27-31:7). In approximately January 2015 REDZIC and SHEMIRANI abandoned the project, according to LAY's allegations (CT 31:8-10). LAY alleged that she contacted Evra's offices, which denied affiliation with REDZIC and SHEMIRANI (CT 31:11-13). LAY allegedly learned that much of the work would need to be demolished and reperformed, at a cost of an additional $83,000 (CT 31:14-19).

LAY sued the above defendants for breach of contract, fraud, unjust enrichment, unfair business practices, professional negligence, breach of the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing, and for promissory estoppel (CT 27:13-17). LAY seeks at least $200,000 in compensatory damages according to proof, prejudgment interest, and punitive damages (CT 32:25-27, 34:3-5, 36:1, 36:16, 37:12-38:13).

2. LAY substitute served SHEMIRANI at his wife's residence, at a time when the couple were temporarily living apart.

In October 2017 SHEMIRANI's wife was served at home with a packet of documents, including the complaint (CT 105:9-10). His wife did not understand the documents. Due to marital issues at the time SHEMIRANI did not reside there. SHEMIRANI did not see the documents until late November or early December 2017 (CT 105:10-13).

3. SHEMIRANI reviewed the served documents, phoned

> LAY's counsel's office, and attended the January 9, 2018 Case Management, where he gained the impression from the trial judge and opposing counsel that all he had to do to defend himself was to appear at the next case management conference, and no one explained his need to hire counsel or set aside the default against him.

After SHEMIRANI received the documents from his wife, he skimmed them and saw not only that he was being sued individually and dba Caspian Enterprise, Inc., but also that there was a January 9, 2018 Case Management Conference to attend, which subjected him to sanctions if he failed to attend (CT 105:14-19). He understood his need to attend the January 9, 2018 Case Management Conference (CT 105:19-20). In December 2017 SHEMIRANI received a Case Management Conference Statement from Plaintiff's counsel, which reiterated the January 9, 2018 date (CT 105:21-22). On December 27, 2017, SHEMIRANI telephoned LAY's attorney Mr. Schilt, but could only reach a paralegal named Jeff. SHEMIRANI told Jeff that he had been wrongfully sued, but was told that the firm did not represent him and could not give him legal advice. Jeff recommended that if he, SHEMIRANI, received a notice to appear in court that he should do so (CT 105:23-27).

On January 4, 2018, SHEMIRANI again called Mr. Schilt's office to try to explain that he, SHEMIRANI, was innocent and wrongfully sued.

Again, SHEMIRANI spoke with the same paralegal, Jeff, who did not allow SHEMIRANI to speak with Mr. Schilt. SHEMIRANI explained that he would send Mr. Schilt a letter with documents showing he did nothing wrong (CT 106:1-4). SHEMIRANI followed through with a letter to Schilt that day explaining his innocence and his company's role concerning the lawsuit (CT 106:5-7, 112).

SHEMIRANI appeared at the January 9, 2018 Case Management Conference. Judge Craddick was on the bench. Mr. Schilt appeared by telephone (CT 106:8-12). SHEMIRANI informed the court that he was wrongfully sued and was there to defend himself as he understood by the notice. Judge Craddick stated that a default had been entered against him but before she could finish the conversation, Mr. Schilt interrupted and requested that the court continue the hearing until February 23, 2018 (CT 106:12-15). Judge Craddick did so and ordered that SHEMIRANI appear again on February 23, 2018 but no one explained to him that he needed to hire a lawyer (CT 106:15-16). The Court's minutes for this Case Management Conference show its recognition that "SHEMIRANI is currently in default and will be consulting with Plf's attorney regarding setting it aside or settlement." (CT 10)

When SHEMIRANI left the courtroom on January 9, 2018, he understood that all he needed to do was to appear February 23, 2018 in order to defend himself. He did not understand about the default against him or that he needed to set it aside (CT 106:17-19).[5]

4. While attending the February 23, 2018 hearing, SHEMIRANI received a commitment from opposing counsel that he would work with him to prove he was not responsible while no one explained to him at that time that he needed to hire an attorney.

SHEMIRANI again appeared in court on February 23, 2018 (CT 106:22). Schilt again appeared by telephone. Counsel appeared for ICG Engineering. SHEMIRANI explained to Judge Craddick that he had paperwork and proof regarding his “innocence” and was wrongly sued. Judge Craddick requested that SHEMIRANI contact Schlit to discuss the matter in more detail. SHEMIRANI received a commitment from Mr. Schlit over the phone that he would work with him to prove that he,

---

[5] At the same January 9, 2018 case management conference, LAY, through her counsel, stipulated to set aside the defaults against NASSER and ICG ENGINEERING, INC. (CT 8-9). That order was entered three days later (CT 9). Those defendants then demurred to LAY’s complaint (CT 11-12). The demurrer was sustained with leave to amend but LAY chose to dismiss the action without prejudice and judgment entered against LAY (CT 12). LAY then refiled against ICG and NASSER in Contra Costa County Superior Court Case No. MSC18-00619 (CT 169:24-170:1). On October 29, 2019, that case was consolidated with this one, MSC17-01607, pursuant to an order to show cause, a month before LAY’s Opening Brief was filed in her appeal (Exh. A, SHEMIRANI Request for Judicial Notice).

SHEMIRANI, was not responsible. The Court noted that the hearing was continued to June 28, 2018. However, no one explained to SHEMIRANI at the time that he needed to hire an attorney (CT 106:22-28). SHEMIRANI understood that all he had to do to defend himself was to meet with Mr. Schilt and see if he could prove that he was not responsible (CT 106:28-107:2).

5. Following instructions from Schilt's office, SHEMIRANI provided Schilt's office with documents and met with Schilt for 90 minutes at the Solano County Courthouse to answer Schilt's questions and in doing so thought he was acting in compliance with his responsibilities in the court case.

Following up on the February 23, 2018 hearing, SHEMIRANI took additional steps that he believed complied with his litigation responsibilities. Based on instructions from Schilt's office, SHEMIRANI sent his documents, including his pay stubs, to Schilt's office. SHEMIRANI set up a meeting with Schilt to prove he was not responsible (CT 107:3-16, 113-114). SHEMIRANI and Schilt met March 15, 2018 in the basement of the Solano County Courthouse. Schlit's paralegal Jeff was also present (CT 107:17-18). During the approximately 90 minute meeting, SHEMIRANI answered all of Schlit's many questions. Schlit told SHEMIRANI that he wanted more information, and details of all job locations where co-defendants Redzic and ICG Engineering worked, including photographs and addresses (CT 107:18-22). Schlit told SHEMIRANI that he might need to come to court and testify against the other defendants.

SHEMIRANI asked Schilt what he would receive in return. Schilt responded that if SHEMIRANI was truthful and provided all the information, he would come up with a fair resolution. During the discussion there was no talk about setting aside the default or that SHEMIRANI would need to hire an attorney. SHEMIRANI understood that he was in compliance with his responsibilities in the court case (CT 107:22-27).

6. Instead of further communications with Schilt's office, SHEMIRANI heard nothing further from that office except for a request for entry of default judgment for over $275,000 several months later.

Instead of further communications with Mr. Schilt's office, however, SHEMIRANI was met with silence. SHEMIRANI did not hear anything more from that office until on or about July 27, 2018, when he received a Request for Entry of Default Judgment to be entered against him for over $275,000 (CT 49, 108:1-26, 116). SHEMIRANI was shocked. This was contrary to his understanding with Schilt's office (CT 108:23-26). SHEMIRANI was led on, intentionally or not, by Schilt, to cooperate and delayed hiring his own attorney to address this matter as a result.

7. SHEMIRANI hired an attorney to set aside the default judgment, who failed to do so.

After one last attempt on July 31, 2018 to communicate with Schilts to ask what happened, SHEMIRANI began looking for an attorney (CT 108:27-109:5). Just over a week later, on August 8, 2018, after searching for attorneys, he hired Daniel Beaver in Walnut Creek to set aside the default judgment and paid a $3,000 retainer for Mr. Beaver to do so (CT 109:6-10).

Mr. Beaver failed to follow through on his assignment. On August 8, 2018, Beaver left a telephone message with and sent an email to LAY's attorney asking that the default be set aside and that the naming of the defendants be corrected so that defendant CASPIAN was not a dba of any defendant, including REDZIC (CT 93:5-9, 95-96). Two days later, LAY's counsel Schilt wrote back stating that he was unwilling to set aside the default, since it had been entered seven months earlier (CT 93:10-13, 97-100).

After August 8, 2018, SHEMIRANI tried several times by email and phone to contact Mr. Beaver and had limited contact with him (CT 109:11-12). When Beaver got in touch with SHEMIRANI he told SHEMIRANI

LAY argues that de novo review applies in this appeal. She is mistaken. An order vacating a default on equitable grounds is reviewed under the abuse of discretion standard. York v. Black (2009) 176 Cal.App.4th 36, 42. Review of an order on a motion for reconsideration pursuant to CCP § 1008 is likewise subject to the abuse of discretion standard. Lucas v. Santa Maria Pub. Airport Dist. (1995) 39 Cal.App.4th 1017, 1027.

"'Discretion is abused whenever, in its exercise, the court exceeds the bounds of reason, all of the circumstances before it being considered. The burden is on the party complaining to establish an abuse of discretion, and unless a clear case of abuse is shown and unless there has been a miscarriage of justice a reviewing court will not substitute its opinion and thereby divest the trial court of its discretionary power.'" Denham v. Superior Court (1970) 2 Cal.3d 557, 566. "'[T]he showing on appeal is wholly insufficient if it presents a state of facts ...which... merely affords an opportunity for a difference in opinion. An appellate tribunal is neither authorized nor warranted in substituting its judgment for the judgment of the trial judge.'" Marriage of Varner (1997) 55 Cal.App.4th 128, 138 (citation omitted).

B. Assuming arguendo that setting aside the default and default